Description :

PDF-f2bad | In May 1940, the German Army and the Allied forces they faced were fairly evenly matched. Two months later Britain was on her own, hopelessly outnumbered and facing imminent defeat. Should the RAF have done more to support the Allied armies in France? Could the RAF have protected the British Army better at Dunkirk? How narrow was the margin of victory in the Battle of Britain? Was the RAF ready to... The RAF in the Battle of France and the Battle of Britain: A Reappraisal of Army and Air Policy 1938-1940
